(57) Insecticide dispensing devices and methods of the present technology provide for the prolonged release of insecticide for the eradication of insect populations.
Insecticide dispensing devices include an attractive toxic sugar bait, and have a housing configured with 5 at least one aperture to allow a gaseous compound to exit the internal cavity and sized to allow entry of a target insect into the internal cavity. Methods of insecticide dispensing include activating the attractive toxic sugar bait in the device and placing the activated device in an area where insects are present.

(57) [Problem] To propose novel technology that allows a priority vehicle to smoothly go through an intersection [Solution] A traffic signal control device 20 includes a main control section 30 and a plurality of traffic light control units 40. When an instruction signal has been input from the main control section 30, the traffic light control unit 40 performs a display control process on a control target traffic signal unit 10 according to a color display sequence specified by sequential display control data 422 stored therein. The main control section 30 detennines whether or not a priority vehicle is approaching an intersection from each road that intersects at the intersection based on a detection signal output from a priority vehicle detector 50 provided to each road. When it has been detennined that a priority vehicle is approaching the intersection, the main control section 30 changes the output order of the instruction signal to each traffic light control unit 40 so that the instruction signal is preferentially output to the traffic light control unit 40 that corresponds to the vehicular traffic for which a priority vehicle that is approaching the intersection has been detected ----- (21) ZN/P/2015/7; (22) 14/08/2015 (32) 26/08/2014.
